What a Newspaper Needs.
Sensation for Mussolini.
For Those That Moan.

By ARTHUR BRISBANE.

HEARST RANCH, San Simeon, Cal., Aug. 16—The Olympic contests finished in a blaze of glory for Uncle Sam. Helene Madison, of Seattle, won another race, broke one more world record.

Young California oarsmen won the Olympic eight-oared championship. Monday there were speeches, congratulations, and the tenth and most successful Olympiad, with the greatest list of broken world records, was over.

Los Angeles and all California are grateful to three men, especially. To William May Garland, whose hard, persistent work brought the games to California; to Zack J. Farmer, who studied the games at Antwerp, and built, well in advance, the oganization that has conducted the brand new village for the 1,600 visiting athletes, and took care of them there, and to the visitors from all over America and the world.

Those visitors have learned, and will report, that if you want to do a big thing in a big way, California is the place.

THOSE AT THIS ranch include David E. Towne, important in the Hearst organization. He knows about newspapers, and buys what they need, including five hundred and sixty-eight thousand tons of newsprint paper, in a year.

That newsprint, which does not include paper for the numerous Hearst magazines, calls for, one million and fifty-six thousand dollars worth of ink.

If you planted 200,000 acres of this ranch with spruce trees and waited 30 years for the trees to mature, you would get from the 200,000-acre forest enough paper to print the Hearst newspapers for only one year and seven months.

The Hearst magazines call for 50,000 tons of coated paper each year.

VISITORS TO CALIFORNIA will tell the world that this climate is not enervating. Anthropologists say the ancient California Indians were the most sluggish of any race, lived largely on grasshoppers, and such wild things, because they lacked energy to go after deer.

Their successors, the white Pacific coast residents, go after everything, and got it, especially world athletic records. What they have done to former Olympic performances would come, naturally, under the head of cruelty to athletes.

Mussolini will vibrate, and say queer things in Italian, when he hears the details of that eight-oared race. Italy was ahead, America next, Canada came third, Great Britain fourth.

Three so-called Nordic races trailing one Latin boat. It was in the last few hundred meters that the powerful, deep-lunged Italians forged ahead, each man carrying on his chest the colors of Italy. It seemed certain that Italy would win, in the country that an Italian discovered.

But in boat No. 2, eight young athletes, with the United States shield on their chests, had made different plans. A small man at the far end of the boat a megaphone strapped to his mouth, called on every divinity from Moloch on, to punish his men, if they did not put their back into it.

They put their backs into it, also the muscles of their long, powerful legs and arms.

And they beat the Italians by

BABY ARRIVES FIVE MONTHS AFTER TRAGEDY

Infant is Born in Morrow Home at Englewood.

MOTHER IS WELL

Betty Gow, Scottish Girl, Probable Nurse.

By The Associated Press.

ENGLEWOOD, N. J., Aug. 16.—Another son was born to the Charles A. Lindberghs today, bringing happiness back to a home long darkened by deepest tragedy.

Five months and 16 days after 20-months-old Charles Augustus Lindbergh Jr. was stolen from his crib to meet his death while all the world sought him, the second baby was born at 6:30 a. m. (East Liverpool time).

Only the fact that the second son had been born was immediately available, but it was generally understood that the baby and its mother were both in good health.

The child was understood to have been born in the Dwight W. Morrow home where the first baby was born and where Mrs. Lindbergh is known to have been up to the past day or two. Mrs. Morrow, Mrs. Lindbergh's mother, was present, having recently returned from Europe.

Englewood Receives News Quietly

Although no statement was forthcoming on this point the probability was considered that the new baby's nurse would be Betty Gow, the Scottish girl who was the first baby's nurse and who first discovered the kidnaping.

Miss Gow was questioned at length after the kidnaping as were all the Lindbergh servants and her sailor suitor, Henry Johnson, was detained for a long time and finally deported. The Lindberghs always expressed complete faith in her. She is at present on a visit to her home in Scotland.

Residents of Englewood received word of the birth of the Lindbergh baby today quietly. No crowd gathered at the gate of the Morrow estate as it did two years ago when the first baby was born.

"The Englewood people have learned that the Lindberghs don't want publicity," one resident explained this change in attitude. "They are trying to be good neighbors by respecting that wish."

Mrs. Lindbergh astounded the world, from the very moment her first baby was kidnaped, by the strength with which she met the tragic situation into which fate threw her son soon after the death of her father, Senator Dwight W. Morrow, who died last year while she and Colonel Lindbergh were making a flying tour of the Far East.

So far as could be learned Mrs. Lindbergh continued about her household duties even from the first, making herself of service to all the searchers for her baby who

LIMA CHOSEN FOR 1933 OHIO LEGION MEET

Col. Ralph D. Cole to Be Elected State Commander.

By The Associated Press.

TOLEDO, O., Aug. 16.—Lima was chosen today for the 1933 convention of the American Legion of Ohio which is closing its annual meeting here today.

The temper of Legionnaires regarding the bonus got out of control again today as it awaited the report of the resolutions committee which is expected to recommend immediate payment of the adjusted compensation certificates.

Senator Fess Jeered

Jeers greeted Senator Simeon D. Fess as he arose to address the delegates and as he concluded he was rewarded with more jeers and applause although he did not mention the bonus in his speech. Apparently taking his cue from the temper of the delegates, the senator merely made indirect reference to the bonus question by insisting that the government could not imperil recovery from the depression by creating billions in obligations.

Other resolutions will criticise the treatment of the bonus army in Washington; reaffirm the Legion's stand for adequate national defense, and demand enactment of legislation providing pensions for widows and children of veterans.

A vote was expected on a proposal calling for repeal of the 18th amendment and for legalization of beer pending the repeal ratification with an affirmative majority predicted.

Of possibly equal interest with the topics of beer, bonus and censure, was today's annual election of officers. Although the election of Col. Ralph D. Cole of Findlay as state commander was assured by the withdrawal of Henry Middleton, Toledo, as a rival candidate, there was a lively four-cornered race for state treasurer.

Candidates for treasurer were Larry J. Gilligan of Cincinnati, the incumbent; L. L. Morris, Toledo; Dr. A. F. Sarver, Greenville, and Walter Liphart, of Martins Ferry.

HOOVER STILL ON VACATION

Chief Executive Continues Fishing Trip in Chesapeake Bay; Plans Unknown.

By International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 16.—Fisherman Herbert Hoover again today kept President Hoover vacationing.

On Chesapeake bay the President-fisherman spent the night aboard the 110-foot commerce department boat Sequoia. Whether he ate for breakfast some of the "nice mess' of trout and bluefish the White House here said he caught the newspapermen couldn't find out—they were respecting his wishes and keeping their boat far enough away not to bother him.

Nobody had said definitely how long the President would continue his cruise. But White House automobiles were kept in readiness for word through the Sequoia's radio to meet the boat whenever it headed for a dock.

THREE NAMED IN BONUS ARMY CLASH COUNTS

Kentucky, Illinois, Nebraska Men Indicted.

By The Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 16.—Three men were indicted by a grand jury today for their part in the fighting between veterans and police which led to the ejection of the bonus marchers army from the capital at the point of army bayonets.

Police said one of the men indicted, Broadus Faulkner, 32, a Kentucky Negro, had served a prison term in Michigan for breaking and entering and that he was sentenced to 90 days this year in Philadelphia as a professional thief.

Faulkner was charged with felonious assault upon Patrolman John E. Winters. Bernard McCoy, 36, a Chicago bricklayer, also was charged with felonious assault, and assault to kill upon Patrolman James E. Scott. Scott was badly injured in the fighting which preceded the calling out of troops by President Hoover.

John O. Olson, 44, a carpenter who address was given as Valparaiso, Nebraska, was charged with felonious assault upon Patrolman Richard O. Bankert. The indictment said Olson used a table leg as a weapon and that Faulkner and McCoy flung bricks.

The grang jury, which has been investigating the bonus army riots since August 5, made its reports to Justice James M. Proctor in the District of Columbia supreme court.

It was indicated that no other charges were expected and that in all probability the inquiry growing out of one of the most spectacular peace time incidents in the nation's history was closed.

Albert Williams, 40, of Cleveland avenue, Breckenridge, Pa., is recovering at his home today from lacerations over his left eye, suffered when he fell from a freight car in the Wellsville yards of the Pennsylvania Railroad company, late Monday, where he was employed. He was removed to the City hospital for treatment.

Negro Love

BEVERLY HILLS, Cal., Aug. 16.—You can always depend on the real old American Negro to say the apt things in a few words.

Up here at the ranch the other day a Negro private of the famous Tenth Cavalry (who are taking care of the American horses) was leading a tired horse around that had lost in his particular competition. He didn't know anyone was in hearing distance, but we heard him say, "Never mind, old boy, you didn't win nothing, but I loves you."

Now let the educated diplomat think of a more fitting thing to say to our foreign and native competitors than that. Never mind what boy or girl, from what state or what country, come and was defeated, "We loves you." Yours,

Will Rogers

By The Associated Press.

MIAMI, Fla., Aug. 16. — A jury studied two versions of the death of Haden Clarke, young writer, as the murder trial of Captain W. N. Lancaster, British flier, drew toward a close today with final arguments by counsel.

One, presented by the defense, pictured Clarke as a man who killed himself because recurrent illness prevented his marriage to Mrs. Jessie M. Keith-Miller, Australian aviatrix, whose love he won from Lancaster.

The case was to be handed to the jury today.

The flier was charged with first degree murder. Conviction carries the death penalty unless a recommendation for mercy is made. Then the sentence would be life.

BUYING ORDERS TUMBLE INTO STOCK MARKET

Prices Advance From $1 to $7 a Share at Opening.

By The Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Aug. 16. — Prices again surged forward in fresh waves of buying today.

The market met occasional flurries of profit-taking, which pared down the extreme gains, but a number of the rails, and a few industrials pushed up to new high levels for the summer recovery, having more than erased the losses of the setback late last week.

The bond market also moved ahead.

Cotton featured the commodities, moving up nearly $1 a bale to a new high for the recovery. Sugar, lead, silver, rubber and several other lines were somewhat higher. Wheat, after advancing about a cent a bushel, lost part of its rise.

Stocks had a buoyant opening, when trading hit a feverish pace, but during the next three hours, the general list failed to equal the high levels of the first few minutes, although a number of the rails were bid up smartly in the middle of the day. Extreme advances of $1 to $7 a share were reduced from $1 to $3 by profit taking here and there, although the list turned dull on the decline.

Prices of New York Stock Exchange seats boomed along with those of securities, a transfer being arranged at $150,000, or $30,000 above the previous transfer.

WOMAN SEEN IN WALKER QUIZ

Mayor Reveals Sex Of "Unknown Person."

By The Associated Press.

EXECUTIVE CHAMBER, Albany, N. Y., Aug. 16. — Governor Roosevelt's investigation of Mayor Walker today probed close to the identity of the "unknown person," who figures in the inquiry, when the mayor revealed that the mysterious recipient of money was a woman.

When Governor Roosevelt observed that the evidence showed that a letter of credit for $10,000 was arranged for the same "unknown person" to whom Russell T. Sherwood, missing accountant, paid $7,500, Walker said:

"I know nothing about the letter of credit. I do know that Sherwood handled income matters for the 'unknown person' and an examination of her accounts would show she had several bank accounts in the city."

The identity of the "unknown person" has been scrupulously guarded by Samuel Seabury, investigator for the Hofstadter legislative committee.

Walker's remark was the first reference to the sex of the mysterious figure that has repeatedly bobbed up in the investigation and the executive hearing here.

The morning session adjourned at noon, to resume at 1 p. m.

The mayor likely will fight the rest of his battle for exoneration without his wife. Mrs. Walker, who attended the first day of the hearing, became ill on last Thursday night. She collapsed while attending mass yesterday.

WELLS GOES TO CAPITAL

Newell Man Returns To State Assembly Meet.

Senator W. Edwin Wells of Newell left today for Charleston to attend the special session of the West Virginia legislature, which re-convened today after a week's recess. The extraordinary session was called five weeks ago by Governor William G. Conley for the purpose of enacting legislation to aid the needy and reduce taxes.

Little was accomplished during the first four weeks, with the exception of a bill limiting all levying bodies in the state to tax rates which would produce not more than 85 percent of the revenue collected last year. Four other bills, regarding the medicinal liquor problem, abolishment of the state prohibition department and the bridge commission, and the transfer of licensing duties of the prohibition commissioner to the tax commissioner, were vetoed by Governor Conley.

Senator Wells was very active during the opening weeks, taking a conservative stand on the broad property classification question and other problems. He engaged in several debates on the floor of the senate during that time.

Last week he attended the state Republican judicial convention at Wheeling on Thursday and Friday, spending the remainder of the week at his home in Newell. The special session of the state assembly is expected to close within the next week.

ROTARY HEARS PHONE PART IN RADIO STORY

J. T. Jenkins Speaks At Luncheon at Noon.

The evolution of radio from its early "wireless" stage into a nation-wide communication medium, combining radio casting with wired transmission of sound over thousands of miles of telephone wires, was portrayed by J. T. Jenkins of Cleveland, division service supervisor of the American Telephone and Telegraph company, today before members of the Rotary club in the Travelers' hotel.

Jenkins will repeat his address Wednesday at 6:15 p. m., before the Lions club at a dinner in the hotel. Following the meeting, the club members will visit the Bell company offices in Market street.

"Behind the scenes of large nation-wide chain broadcasts lies a vast network of special telephone circuits which carry programs to more than 170 relaying stations in all parts of the United States," Jenkins said.

Network Explained

This far-flung network, the speaker explained, originates in New York City and extends by underground cables to Pittsburgh, thence over open wires to New Castle, Cleveland, Maumee and west to Chicago, Omaha and Denver. Side legs are taken off at points such as Cleveland to feed Akron; Maumee to feed Detroit and Cincinnati and from the latter point south to Louisville, Nashville and Atlanta. In a similar manner circuits branch off the main cables at numerous points to give a blanket coverage of practically all cities in the country.

"Considerably in advance of a program broadcast, telephone technicians must 'line up' the network to make sure tones of various frequencies will be transmitted with fidelity from the originating station. First a 260 cycle tone is transmitted through the system from the originating station, usually in New York. The quality and volume of the tone is tested at points along its route and adjusted until transmission is satisfactory.

"Subsequently other tones for cycles up to 5,000 are sent along the circuits and tested. When all tones are reproduced accurately, the network is considered properly equalized or lined up. After these preparatory steps, music is sent over the network as a final test. When the telephone men are assured that everything is satisfactory, the network is turned over to the broadcasting company for service.

Pickups in Programs Explained

Various artists of a radio program may do their bit into microphones in widely-separated cities and the program still will have continuity for listeners, Jenkins said.

"Assuming that the first part of a program involved an orchestra at New York followed by a speaker at Chicago, a special pick-up circuit is provided between Chicago and New York and held in readiness for a telegraphic cue for making the switch," he declared. "At the cue, Chicago will switch to an outgoing circuit back to New York. A moment later New York will connect the incoming Chicago circuit to the nation-wide network and flash back a cue to the speaker in Chicago to start his talk.

"The switching to and from the special circuit is not done simultaneously at Chicago and New York for mechanical reasons. If it were, listeners would hear an objectionable sing or howl due to establishment of a complete loop for electrical energy to travel. This disturbance is commonly known as 'round trip singing.' Any number of pick-up points can be brought into a program in this manner by extending special circuits to the desired cities."

Jenkins said that more than 300 telephone men are required to handle broadcasts which originate in portable pick-up equipment at football games, outdoor speeches and similar events. Constant maintenance and service work on radio circuits is conducted by the Bell system in line with its general policy of insuring clear transmission over its lines at all times, he said.

Peace in Pottery Industry

Peace in the American general ware industry is assured for two years, as a result of a wage agreement signed at Atlantic City, N. J., Monday night by representatives of the United States Potters' association and the National Brotherhood of Operative Potters.

Although the agreement will date two years from next October 1, its provisions, which include an adjustment of the scale paid for various lines of work in the ceramic industry, will become effective today, according to Secretary-Treasurer Charles F. Goodwin of the manufacturers' organization.

The conferees, with President James M. Duffy as chief of the brotherhood's representatives and Joseph M. Wells of Newell, as chairman of the manufacturers' labor committee, were in session eight days, during which all angles of the situation were discussed. Amity marked the deliberations.

The settlement is good news to the East Liverpool district, with its large ceramic plants in the neighboring West Virginia cities of Chester and Newell, where 5,000 skilled and unskilled workers are employed in normal times. And it means both employers and operatives are ready for "business—full steam ahead".

First Fiddler or Nothing

Adolph Hitler, refusing to bury himself in German politics by accepting a vice-chancellorship, demonstrates the uncompromising ambition which has made him internationally important. He is in a position to drive a hard bargain, and he knows it.

By dictating his efforts to opposing the present government he burns his bridges behind him. President von Hindenburg represents the goal he will try to attain. Nothing short of it will satisfy him. Von Hindenburg, on the other hand, realizing that Hitler does not intend to be placated by an offer of second fiddle, may be expected to pursue a more vigorous course, if such a thing is possible, in dealing with his rival for supremacy. There is to be no rest, it seems, for Germany's aged hero.

A politically quiet Germany would remove a major source of international apprehension. Slight as is the direct relationship between most Americans and Germany, for instance, there can be no denying that the threat offered by the restless German population and its aggressive leaders is a factor in American uncertainty. It is another illustration of the inter-relationship of a world tied together with commercial bonds.

There is every reason to believe that the crisis is near; Hitler either will be stopped or he will forge on to the goal he has set for himself. Whatever the ultimate outcome may be, it will be better than the present uncertainty.

Reaction

In the eyes of his enemies as well as his friends President Hoover has added a cubit to his political stature by the opening address of his campaign for reelection. The reaction to his remarks during last week's notification ceremonies has been distinctly favorable.

His political opponents have conceded that the speech, however far it fell short of their standards, was the best of his career. They have given him the greatest credit that a politican can expect these days; they have acknowledged his honesty. Naturally, there is violent disagreement with him on many points, but his position is clear.

He has challenged, without mincing words, that considerable body of public opinion whose political attitude is best described as "bitter." He knows, as everyone knows, that this attitude is a vital threat to the continuance of his term. It is the force behind the dissatisfaction vote which every elected officer of the government must face in periods of adversity. Instead of appealing to the prejudices of Americans, as his opponent is enabled to do by virtue of his position as the challenging candidate, President Hoover must limit himself to statements of fact. He can describe only policies which he has pursued to alleviate the depression. As well as anyone else, he knows that defeat will ensue next November unless those policies can command public confidences.

He dare not ask publicly what more any president could have done than he has done. He dare not make excuses for his failure to protect his country from the depression; the people have come to consider their president as a sort of medicine man. If one fails, a successor is elected. The folly of this curious conception of presidential power in a republic cannot be exposed by its victim—particularly by a victim who took advantage of it in 1928.

Walker At Albany

The mayor of New York who told his story to Governor Roosevelt at Albany last week was a far different man from the one who, as a high liver, flaunter of reality and wise-cracker, has captivated national fancy, if not admiration for his moral purposes as a politician. It would not take many weeks of the Albany-type Walker to destroy the illusion that here is a man who does about as he pleases and gets away with it.

The man who sat in the presence of Governor Roosevelt and tried to explain why he should not be removed from office was not quite so polished and debonair as Jimmy Walker is expected to be. His ordinarily ready tongue faltered. His hair was mussed. Irish wit was subordinate to Irish temper. If he consciously was making a play for public opinion, it was a play for sympathy—not for chuckles and admiration.

Walker's chameleon-like change was in contrast to the steady role played by the man who was hearing his case. Governor Roosevelt, who knows better than anyone else the enormity of his political stake in the Walker case inquiry, went at the task confronting him with a calm and steady hand. He leaned over backward in his patent desire to be fair, yet seemed to know when to stiffen to keep the inquiry from getting unbalanced.

The hearing will be concluded this week, in all probability. It now appears, however, that the governor's decision may be held up indefinitely by legal devices. This should be avoided at any cost. Governor Roosevelt is the chief Democratic figure in a national political campaign. It would be unfair to him and unfair to those who are interested in him, whether as friends or opponents, to keep him under the cloud of so important a political decision.

Squelched

The trouble with revolutions is that they either are or aren't successful. They never turn out so-so.

This may be a week in which no revolution will occur. So far as American knew, none was supposed to occur last week, but Spanish royalists staged a surprise party for their republican friends.

It wasn't successful, despite at least an average amount of spilled blood. Somehow or other it failed to pick up the momentum that any uprising must gain almost instantly in order to overcome the entrenched party in control of the government.

When it was all over, Jos San Jurjo, erstwhile leader of the dissatisfied minority, had nothing to offer but the adequate explanation, "Everybody abandoned me." There is nothing more to be said. Still, it is not becoming in him or any other revolutionist to forget that there are many ways of doing the same thing.

Adolf Hitler was squelched once, too. His first revolution didn't amount to anything at all, but its failure served to make him more ambitious than ever. No one will deny that he has been doing a good piece of work—a real revolution achieved with oratory instead of bullets.

The abortive attempt at overthrow which excited Spain last week is an indication to the outside world that the royalists are far from willing to take a place on the shelf peacefully. Whether or not the Bourbon symbols of monarchy are active or passive in the situation is left to conjecture. Alfonso, adhering to good form, insists that he knew nothing of the attempt to bring back the family. A potential king, for all his blue blood, is not much different from a "people's choice" politician. His best game is a waiting game. If his can get the people to make the advances he improves his tactical position. Significantly, the deposed but hopeful monarchy of Spain has issued no orders to royalists to give up the cause. While there is a chance, they will be waiting.

Easy Chair Spectators

The Olympic games of today are reminders of many things, from champions of previous years to the lore of the Greeks and from there on back again. Each revival of the event opens a storehouse of memory and speculation to delight the world.

This year's games are reminder, also, that the world is becoming a more interesting, if not always a better, place to live. Consider the breadth over which detailed descriptions and photographs of the Olympic games were spread this year, almost as rapidly as the events were run off.

The workman on his 6 o'clock street car read in his morning paper everything that had happened the previous day. The office worker was kept informed throughout the day concerning the achievements of his favorites. Moving pictures of important events were shown on the screen. Newspaper and magazine pictures brought athletes closer by far to the easy chair spectators a thousand miles from Los Angeles than the eye of stadium spectators could bring performers a thousand feet away.

There was not an instant during the course of the games that this process of spreading enjoyment of the Olympic games was not continuing—in the United States, in England, Canada, France, Japan, Australia, Finland, Sweden—in every nation with contestants in the game, and that almost includes every nation with newspapers and moving pictures. It was one of the biggest stories of the year—a story that ran continuously for two weeks with no cessation of suspense.

Most remarkable of all, it was a cheerful story—a constantly expanding record of physical accomplishment creditable to mankind. Warned to expect many threats to kindly international feeling, Americans, particularly, were pleased with the absence of poor sportsmanship. As national hosts they felt a collective responsibility for the success of the event this year. Now that it has come to a successful conclusion they are frankly happy that the United States has given the next host to Olympic athletes such a high mark at which to aim.

Highlights of Ohio History

ONLY THE NAME REMAINS.

By J. H. Galbraith.

Only the name Utopia, attached to a Clermont county hamlet, is left to indicate that there once existed several organizations of a society based upon communism.

In 1844, such a group was formed in Clermont county and bought three tracts of land in Franklin township, but the movement blew up when members became dissatisfied with their own condition.

This group was known as the fourtierites and a spiritualistic colony bought some of the Franklin township land. It also fell into trouble and its end was hastened when a great flood swept away the main building with a loss of 17 lives.

Then Uptopia was founded.

Some from the disbanded fourtierites and some from the spiritualistic banded together to establish Utopia. For a few years, the members were happy. But dissatisfaction came and many of the more vigorous members withdrew and eventually the rest, with the action of the trustees of Utopia, discarded the communistic features of the hamlet and it became just like the other little towns of that vicinity.

Words of the Wise

He who hath lost confidence hath little else to lose.

Better to live rich than to die rich.

The wicked flee when no man pursueth.

The joy that isn't shared dies young.

Do not fly until your wings are feathered.

An ass that kicks against the wall, receives the blow himself.

Enough is as good as a sackful.

There is a necessity for proving the existence of light.

New York Day By Day

By O. O. McINTYRE.

NEW YORK, Aug. 16—This is not a pretty pastel of the literary work but it comes from an earnest, distinguished man of letters. As such, it should be of special interest to ambitious writers, so many of them write about their hopes and fears. Here it is:

"I do not believe there are in the world today more than 200 men and women making enormous money, writing. When I say enormous money, I am thinking of something around $150,000 a year. This is not so big in big professions—law, banking, medicine and even among movie stars.

"I know perhaps a thousand famous writers, poets and artists who, when not in galling poverty, are in shabby-genteel, just-getting-along niches of life. Most of them have aching worries regarding the future and a dependent old age. Take yourself as a fairly conspicuous example.

"You are a protagonist of the modern whirl. I do not know your income, although I suspect it is rather large. Yet if, as in the old days before the syndication, you were paid by a single newspaper, the returns would be comparatively insignificant. Not more than $5,000 a year at top-most.

Well, illiterate gag men, brewing sewage combustion from the gutters, make thrice that working for a single firm in Hollywood. Richard Harding Davis, who with Irwin Cobb and Frank Ward O'Malley, was one of the three best reporters, left about $3,000. In any other calling he would have amassed $500,000.

"But for sales and resales of movie rights after death there would be no estate. Our benign government does not encourage the writer, whose professional life is ten years. It taxes him, and unjustly, more than big business which, incidentally, put America in the frightful dilema she is in today.

"Such a gloriously magnificent writer as Don Marquis has been lured—and who can blame him?—from literature by fancy salaries of the movies. One of his talented and devoted admirers once wrote: "O rare Don Marquis! Devout and ribald sipirt, he has also known the Tavern of Despair, whose fireside bench is well polished by many old customers." Don, in Hollywood, found making a living a minor technique. His 'tavern of despair' today is a Spanish castle with flaming awnings and a patio. To literature's eternal loss!

"Poe, penniless, has many replicas. You know them as well as I. Indeed, you were dining with three the last time we met. Talented fellows of infinite genius and writing charm, hacking at penny-liners and ticking off sonnets to assuage hunger. Even a monger of scandal makes ten times what the average forthright novelist does, who gives purity to his far worthier literary ideals.

"I am not embittered. You, I think, know that, I have educated my children in the best colleges and launched them successful in life. I have a good home and live well. I am known as a writer, but most of my income has come from sidelines. Save for my multiple outside activities, I could not have made more than $5,000 a year. Thus have I gone adventuring with many cargoes, and I have worked from 12 to 14 hours a day for 25 years.

"There is no money writing books, and how many playwrights wind up in the opulence of the banker, some of whom are proving crooks. One of the most famous playwrights is supported by old friends. You can see many of them who authored successes of other years, around the Players and the Lambs, showing seedy through the tatters of time.

"I saw all this years ago, and decided to scatter my fire. I have written books, plays and even newspaper columns, and I never wrote a line of which I was ashamed. Yet my biggest income has come through writing advertisement booklets, brochures for varied commercial activities, but they took much out of me. I could have written far better books without such millstones around my neck.

"Finally, let no one envy the so-called famous novelist or playwright. I have passed three along the street within the past six months. They were riding the big breaker in their day, yet it would be a strain for most people to recall them today. Europe remembers its writers by public squares and pensions and streets named for them. In America we pay this deference to the Jimmy Walkers."

How To Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND.

HEART disease continues to be one of the leading causes of disability in middle age. Many cases of heart disease could have been prevented if proper precautions had been taken. Too often the sufferer goes to a physician too late, when little help can be given.

The heart pumps blood through the body. By this action the blood, rich in oxygen from the lungs and nutritive elements from the food, is distributed to the organs and tissues of the body. This means that the heart has to do a great deal of work.

The heart is made up of many muscles and if these are weakened, either as a result of infection or disease, their efficiency is decreased and less work should be demanded of the heart.

It is here that a great mistake is made. Few realize that the heart, like any other muscle in the body, requires rest when fatigued. If the heart muscles is allowed to rest and is given proper care, it becomes refreshed and strengthened, able to resume the normal demands made upon it.

Excessive calls for work must never be placed upon a damaged and diseased heart. Severe and exerting labor must be avoided. Enough hours of sleep and sufficient rest are imperative. It is often advisable to take on regular hours in bed for the needed heart rest.

Violent exercise is a common cause of heart disease. It is dangerous even for a normal heart, and suicidal for one who has a damaged heart.

Overweight is another common and neglected cause for heart disease. Carelessness in eating, especially overating, leads to heart trouble. Chronic indigestion, constipation, infected teeth, tonsils, sinuses, gallbladder and other diseased organs are contributary factors in producing heart disease.

I cannot overemphasize the importance of rest. In advanced cases of heart disease it may be necessary to have periods of complete rest for days, or even weeks. This is the only way to permit the heart to recuperate.

I know many persons who take one or two hours of rest in the middle of the day. They are sensible. They realize their weakness and know that rest is the only way to prevent heart failure. It is only a foolish man who whips his tired horse homeward bound.

Sufferers from heart disease should report to their physician at regular intervals. Examination of heart, lungs, and blood pressure at stated times is a wise precaution. An examination of the urine should be made at each visit.

Please bear in mind that heart disease does not mean shortened life; but it does not mean that your expectation of life is determined by the care and respect you give your heart.

ONCE OVER

By J. J. Mundy.

At Home.

You raise much objection to certain noises in your home and state vigorously that they unnerve you.

The children's mechanical toys drive you to madness.

You think they should be operated only in your absence.

It requires very little to irritate you in your home.

Isn't it because you make no effort to control yourself?

Where you are employed annoying things occur but you go ahead with your work just the same because you must, or lose your job.

If you used only a small part of the effort you exert at control during business hours, when you reach home, you would not be heard grumbling at home.

You are right in asking for quiet in your home when you want to rest, but if you think that the family should tiptoe around and be noiseless in every thing they do while you are at home you are demanding too much.

If you want to be welcome in your own home, don't ask the family to make too many changes in their regular routine.

To have to be on guard all the time is as irksome to your wife and children as it would be to you if it were required of you.

You don't want them to prefer your absence, do you?

Rewards

BY ALINE MICHAELIS.

Of all rewards beneath the sun
The best is this: to hear within,
Above the world's loud strife and din,
A quiet voice that says: "Well done!"

Some labor long for worldly fame,
And count it as life's highest prize;
Star-bright, sun-bright in their rapt eyes
Shines this fair gift of man's acclaim.

And others hold the praise of friends
A thing more dear, of greater worth;
Love's voice alone they ask of Earth,
For every lack it makes amends.

But best of all the guerdons won
In Earth's applause, or friendly hearts;
The voice which greatest bliss imparts,
Is one within that says "Well done!"

The Reviewing Stand

By TOM T. JONES.

EAST Liverpool folk were interested in the summer of 1903 by the organization of a new cornet band in Sebring where many former residents of this locality had gone to assist in the manning of the pottery plants which then were being operated there. Others were intrigued by the fact that the famous Carrie Nation had been procured for an address at Idora park in Youngstown.

Among the farmers of Columbiana county in this same interim there was decided interest in the showing of W. D. Miller, a resident near Scio, Harrison county, with sheep. That season he procured 200 pounds of wool from 78 yearlings an average of more than 11 pounds to each sheep.

It was in this year of 1903 that adherents and devotees of Bethany college hereabouts heard the pleasant information that the institution during the preceding year had for the first time in several years paid its running expenses from its revenues. There was optimism in the expectation of 300 students at the opening of the college that fall. Those then entering the school found that the old commencement hall had been remodeled into a boys' dormitory of 20 rooms. And this improvement had been added to by the erection of a new gymnasium.

On Sunday, June 22, 1903, Dr. David Jones, a former president of Adrian, Mich., college, was re-elected pastor of the First Methodist Protestant church in East Liverpool at a congregational meeting which followed the morning service of that day. At the same time Proctor Ankrim, one of the members of the church, was selected to represent the membership at the annual conference of the denomination which was to be held later in the year.

There was interest in sections of Columbiana county that year in the final sermon delivered by Rev. F. J. Cope at Elkton on Friday, June 26, that year. He was then also the pastor of the Friends' church in Salem. His farewell message was preliminary to his accepting a call to Columbus.

IN FORMER days Democrats throughout Ohio were frequently referred to as "The Unterrified" by their friends of the Republican opposition. It was declared by some of them that the "Unterrified" of 1903 assembled in the court house at Lisbon on Wednesday, June 24, 1903, to name a list of candidates for the fall election. This gathering of the party stood out at the time because it was the first similar assemblage of Democrats in 28 years which W. S. Potts, editor of the Lisbon Patriot, failed to attend.

East Liverpool and Wellsville citizens had the unusual pleasure on the evening of Friday, Nov. 14, 1879, of hearing a former vice president of the United States, the Honorable Schuyler Colfax, deliver an address upon "Abraham Lincoln" at the First Methodist church of the down-river city. His appearance was under the auspices of the Cleveland & Pittsburgh Railway Reading Rooms association. In order that those of the Pottery City might be returned to their homes at the conclusion of the lecture a special train was arranged for their transportation.

On Jan. 24, 1903 Mr. and Mrs. Mark Brownlow and Mr. and Mrs. William Beardmore of this city sailed from New York City for England. There they spent several months in visiting the pottery section of the country. They returned to their home here in October of that year.

There were in former days many in East Liverpool who had at some time or other seen Joseph Jefferson, the famed actor, playing the role of "Rip Van Winkle. In 1903 many of these were impressed by the fact that this veteran actor was then concluding his 61st year upon the stage. At the time he also had played "Rip Van Winkle" for 39 consecutive years.

They were then interested in knowing that he essayed this role in which he became such a success by reason of his having read favorable comment of his own acting of Goldfish in "The Road to Ruin," which had been made by Washington Irving in his "Life and Letters." It was then given out that Joseph Jefferson, though appearing in infant roles at the age of three, really began his stage work at 10 when he imitated T. D. Rice, a commedian deliniating Negro character. Dressed as a replica of himself he was nightly released from a bag by Mr. Rice.

THE largest open-air gathering which up to that time was said to have been assembled in East Liverpool was that held on Brunt's Hill just off Calcutta Road and the later St. Clair avenue on Tuesday evening, June 23, 1903. The attraction upon that summer night was the then celebrated and widely known Colonel Cooper, a purveyor of medicine which he maintained had powerful curative properties.

Colonel Cooper was the man who wore a broadcloth suit which had buttons upon it that consisted of ten and twenty dollar gold pieces. Upon that evening he inaugurated a stay of one month in East Liverpool. He arrived in the city earlier in the day and was met by his own band of 20 pieces. He was accompanied by his wife and child. He came from Dayton where he attended a meeting of the directors of his company.

He was escorted to the grounds where his company of vaudeville artists had preceded him. At noon that day he paraded the streets of the city. Perhaps there never was such a parade in the entire annals of the community. He negotiated the several streets of the then town in a landeau that was drawn by two thoroughbred Kentucky horses.

But the singular feature of the departure was that as he proceeded he scattered money into the ranks of the witnessing populace. In the end he had a long procession following him. Some in this manner received unexpected finds of silver pieces.

Under the circumstances there was great interest in his first appearance on Brunt's hill. Hence the crowd that was attracted to the spot. Another feature of that opening night was a cake-eating contest which a young lad present won and received the sum of $5 for his gastronomical accomplishment.

Then he made a marked address describing the ills of mankind for which he recommended his medicine, a limited quantity of which he declared he had with him that evening. Over 200 hands went up when he asked the number interested. The supply was thus soon disposed of. On a subsequent night he had the sum of $1,000 upon a table beside him to give to dissatisfied customers. None demanded their money back. On the contrary there was an increased demand for the medicine.

ON another occasion there was a nail-driving contest during the preliminary session before the selling of this medicine upon Brunt's hill. This was won by one of the women present and she was given the sum of $5. Always there was a new attraction for the people which served to bring them upon the plot.

The address of Colonel Cooper was in itself an interesting departure. It dove-tailed nicely into the atmosphere which had been credited by the music given by his band and by the performances of his vaudeville artists. Finally he had a selling place near the entrance to the plot of ground which he occupied. There he frequently consulted those who came to see him. And there were many testimonials regarding the benefits that had been derived by those who had used his remedies.

The presence of Colonel Cooper in East Liverpool during those days more than a quarter of a century ago serves to direct attention to this method of selling remedies which formerly was a rather regular departure all over the country. It recalls the fact that some very capable musicians and entertainers were in this manner heard in the open by the public.

There were those who cured corns by the dropping of liquid upon the shoe leather just above where they exhibited themselves. There was the purveyor of snake oil who usually brought a number of ugly-looking rattlers with him and others of a less poisonous specie. These were on occasions laid upon the ground just between the people and the seller.

Many in East Liverpool will recall the perhaps last aggregation of medicine sellers to visit this city. At least this was perhaps the largest aggregation recently appearing here. It was in the summer of 1924 when a tent was erected near the California Hollow run just off West Ninth street. And they remained here for a considerable interval.

Crowds milled about the plot each evening to hear the very interesting and creditable program that was given preliminary to the selling of the various remedies offered the visitors to the grounds. And the sales were considerable. And some of the medicines then given the people were later sold in business houses here.

THE first flag to be floated over the Horace Mann school in the East End was unfurled on Friday, April 24, 1903. The school at the time was under the immediate supervision of Professor Miller. Superintendent R. E. Rayman and Professor Hugh F. Laughlin, in charge of music at the city schools, were in attendance at the event. The children then attending it paraded into the open and sang "The Star Spangled Banner," "America" and "Columbia the Gem of the Ocean" before the flag was flounted to the breeze. Many visitors were present and the occurrance had a stimulating effect upon the school life of the suburb and the city.

Under the auspices of the Ladies Auxiliary of the Y. M. C. A., and directed by Mrs. H. E. Monroe and Miss Lucy Skenninger there was depicted in the Sixth Street Opera house on Thursday night, April 23, 1903, a period of English history that was entitled "Oliver Cromwell."

There was a large number of young men and women in the cast of characters utilized. A chorus of 80 voices sang. D. M. McLane assumed the role of Oliver Cromwell while Dr. E. L. Trimmer appeared as Charles I. Mrs. W. R. Dawson was Lady Cromwell and Sherman Herbert was John Hampdon. The character of John Pym was assumed by Harry Wagner.

Mrs. Monroe was a scholar of note and a writer of ability. She had visited the depicted scenes in addition to having made a wide research in her stuy of the Cromwellian period. She gave an illuminating description of this part of English history while also showing views of the localities in which the events occurred.

The muscal program included a solo by Miss Alice Devon and the singing of a quartet in which she was also the soprano singer; Mrs H. M. Haines, contralto, Frederick Koch, tenor, and Charles Heath baritone. The chorus sang "Praise To God."

Mrs. J. C. Allison was the president of the auxiliary giving the performance at the time; Mrs. E. L. Trimmer the first and Mrs. W. W. Hamilton the second vice president. Mrs. Joseph Wilson was the financial secretary, Miss Nellie Wilson the recording secretary and Mrs. G. R. Patterson the treasurer.

The affair attracted many and consisted of four cumulative parts.

The dated history of the United States was pushed back to the year 730 A. D., recently when an Indian house was discovered in eastern Arizona. This place shows when Pueblo civilization flourished.

The Faithful Cheat

BY RUBY M. AYRES

SYNOPSIS: When Mark Merriman sailed to the Congo, shortly after his secret marriage with Sondra Kent, Sondra thought she could not be happy, but now she realizes that she has learned to do without Mark. Her marriage was unpremeditated, for she had determined not to marry a poor man, and she begins to find that her hasty action does not bring her contentment. One factor in her dissatisfaction is the changed attitude of John Anderson, who she begins to believe must suspect something has happened. Anderson has advised Sondra and helped her financially, somewhat as a guardian, but underneath she has believed that he cared for her. He can not tell her about this, since he is married, living apart from his wife. He tells Sondra one evening that he is going abroad. She lives now with her married sister, Flora, who herself married for money.

Chapter 14.

NEWS OF JOHN.

SOMETIMES Sondra took out her wedding ring and looked at it, wondering if it really belonged to her—it seemed such an eternity since that hurried ceremony—that brief honeymoon.

Mark had written from the only port the ship had touched—a long passionate letter which she knew almost by heart, and yet there again she had the unreal feeling that it was merely something beautiful and quite apart from herself—this love of which he wrote so eloquently.

Of course if the door opened and he suddenly came in everything would be just as it was when they parted—she would recapture the old joy and happiness.

Sondra closed her eyes for a moment and tried to visualize his face, but somehow even that seemed to evade her.

She sighed and turned restlessly away.

Flora was out—when was she ever at home?—and for once in her life Sondra had an empty afternoon.

It was too wet to go out, and there was nowhere that she wanted to go.

John Anderson was still abroad; she had heard from him once or twice—from Paris, Vienna—Berlin—short, friendly letters which told her little or nothing, except that he was moving about and could give no fixed address except his bankers.

It was strange that she should miss him more than she missed Mark. It worried her, too, because it seemed all wrong that the man whom she loved and whose wife she was seemed to have faded into a far horizon, while the other, for whom she cared nothing, was always in her thoughts.

"It's because I'm so used to him," was the explanation she found. "There was always John to turn to—it's unkind of him to have stayed away so long."

The same old photographs of society people—opening bazaars, smiling into the camera with babies on their laps, dressed up in fancy costumes for charity performances, vying with each other for the most publicity.

Sondra yawned; if only something new and exciting would happen!

Sondra felt her face flushing. He had been in Vienna when he last wrote to her—and that was a week . . no, ten days ago.

And who was Nathalie Symons?

"John gets in at six forty," Cass said.
"John!" Sondra said. She had turned slightly pale.

Sondra threw the paper aside.

Was this the reason why John was staying away for so long?

She sat for a long time, lost in thought, vague discomfort in her heart.

If only Mark had not gone away—if only she had been brave enough to face life with him.

When Mark came home. . . Sondra's mind seemed to stop short with a queer little pain. He had only been gone a month, and already she was half dreading the day when he would return, asking herself tortuous questions as to what they would do with life or what life would do with them when they were together again.

At the back of Sondra's mind was an ever growing doubt about her marriage, an ever growing consciousness that it would have been better to wait.

And yet she knew that given those last two days over again she would have used them in just the same way.

She got up restlessly once more and looked out of the window.

The rain was not so heavy, and there was a faint light everywhere, as if the sun was trying to break through.

A taxi sped up the street and came to a standstill at the door. Sondra watched without much interest. Presently a man got out—a man in a queer check suit with a flaming red tie—Stephen Cassidy.

She was conscious of great surprise; Cass did not like Flora, and neither did she like him, so it was very seldom he called, but now he spoke a word to the driver, evidently telling him to wait before he came on to the front door.

A moment later a maid was in the room.

"Will you see Mr. Cassidy, please, miss?"

"Ask him to come up." Sondra was glad of the diversion.

Cass came into the room wreathed in smiles, his hand outstretched.

He always brought a sense of breeziness with him, of good cheer and unquenchable optimism. Sondra realized again as he gave her hand a bear's grip how tremendously she liked him.

"Thought we'd go along together," he said without preamble. "Know Mrs. Lomax is out, or I shouldn't have dared to call. Saw her on Fifth avenue half an hour ago. Oughtn't you to get your hat on?"

"I don't know what in the world you're talking about," Sondra said laughingly. "Wouldn't it be as well to explain?"

His face looked a blank for a moment, then he said:

"But you're coming, aren't you?"

She made a gesture of despair. "Coming where? I'm not a thought-reader."

Cass explained at last.

"To the pier, of course. The boat's in at six-forty. John will be on it."

There was a profound silence.

"John!" Sondra said; she had lost color a little.

"Are you sure," she asked, with an effort.

Lost 20 Lbs. of Fat In Just 4 Weeks

Mrs. Mae West of St. Louis, Mo., writes: "I'm only 28 years old and weighed 170 lbs. until taking one box of your Kruschen Salts just 4 weeks ago. I now weigh 150 lbs. I also have more energy and furthermore I've never had a hungry moment."

Fat folks should take one half teaspoonful of Kruschen Salts in a glass of hot water in the morning before breakfast—it's the SAFE, harmless way to reduce as tens of thousands of men and women know.

For your health's sake ask for and get Kruschen at any drug store—the cost for a bottle that lasts 4 weeks is but a trifle and if after the first bottle you are not joyfully satisfied with results—money back. —Adv.

THE THEATER

COLUMBIA

"The Dark Horse," adopted by two former political correspondents from a story by an anonymous author, said to be a prominent political figure, concerns the difficulties encountered when a political party cannot reach an agreement on its candidate for governor and compromises on a "dark horse," who turns out to be difficult to handle because of a tendency to do the wrong thing at the right moment—for the opposing party. Warren William is called in to manage the candidate's campaign and steer him in the proper channels. The situation is productive of a brand of comedy rare on stage and screen.

Peace in Pottery Industry

Peace in the American general ware industry is assured for two years, as a result of a wage agreement signed at Atlantic City, N. J., Monday night by representatives of the United States Potters' association and the National Brotherhood of Operative Potters.

Although the agreement will date two years from next October 1, its provisions, which include an adjusiment of the scale paid for various lines of work in the ceramic industry, will become effective today, according to Secretary-Treasurer Charles F Goodwin of the manufacturers' organization.

The conferees, with President James M. Duffy as chief of the brotherhood's representatives and Joseph M. Wells of Newell, as chairman of the manufacturers' labor committee, were in session eight days, during which all angles of the situation were discussed. Amity marked the deliberations.

The settlement is good news to the East Liverpool district, with its large ceramic plants in the neighboring West Virginia cities of Chester and Newell, where 5,000 skilled and unskilled workers are employed in normal times. And it means both employers and operatives are ready for "business—full steam ahead".

First Fiddler or Nothing

Adolph Hitler, refusing to bury himself in German politics by accepting a vice-chancellorship, demonstrates the uncompromising ambition which has made him internationally important. He is in a position to drive a hard bargain, and he knows it.

By dictating his efforts to opposing the present government he burns his bridges behind him. President von Hindenburg represents the goal he will try to attain. Nothing short of it will satisfy him. Von Hindenburg, on the other hand, realizing that Hitler does not intend to be placated by an offer of second fiddle, may be expected to pursue a more vigorous course, if such a thing is possible, in dealing with his rival for supremacy. There is to be no rest, it seems, for Germany's aged hero.

A politically quiet Germany would remove a major source of international apprehension. Slight as is the direct relationship between most Americans and Germany, for instance, there can be no denying that the threat offered by the restless German population and its aggressive leaders is a factor in American uncertainty. It is another illustration of the inter-relationship of a world tied together with commercial bonds.

There is every reason to believe that the crisis is near; Hitler either will be stopped or he will forge on to the goal he has set for himself. Whatever the ultimate outcome may be, it will be better than the present uncertainty.

Reaction

In the eyes of his enemies as well as his friends President Hoover has added a cubit to his political stature by the opening address of his campaign for reelection. The reaction to his remarks during last week's notification ceremonies has been distinctly favorable.

His political opponents have conceded that the speech, however far it fell short of their standards, was the best of his career. They have given him the greatest credit that a politican can expect these days; they have acknowledged his honesty. Naturally, there is violent disagreement with him on many points, but his position is clear.

He has challenged, without mincing words, that considerable body of public opinion whose political attitude is best described as "bitter." He knows, as everyone knows, that this attitude is a vital threat to the continuance of his term. It is the force behind the dissatisfaction vote which every elected officer of the government must face in periods of adversity. Instead of appealing to the prejudices of Americans, as his opponent is enabled to do by virtue of his position as the challenging candidate, President Hoover must limit himself to statements of fact. He can describe only policies which he has pursued to alleviate the depression. As well as anyone else, he knows that defeat will ensue next November unless those policies can command public confidences.

He dare not ask publicly what more any president could have done than he has done. He dare not make excuses for his failure to protect his country from the depression; the people have come to consider their president as a sort of medicine man. If one fails, a successor is elected. The folly of this curious conception of presidential power in a republic cannot be exposed by its victim—particularly by a victim who took advantage of it in 1928.

Walker At Albany

The mayor of New York who told his story to Governor Roosevelt at Albany last week was a far different man from the one who, as a high liver, flaunter of reality and wise-cracker, has captivated national fancy, if not admiration for his moral purposes as a politician. It would not take many weeks of the Albany-type Walker to destroy the illusion that here is a man who does about as he pleases and gets away with it.

The man who sat in the presence of Governor Roosevelt and tried to explain why he should not be removed from office was not quite so polished and debonair as Jimmy Walker is expected to be. His ordinarily ready tongue faltered. His hair was mussed. Irish wit was subordinate to Irish temper. If he consciously was making a play for public opinion, it was a play for sympathy—not for chuckles and admiration.

Walker's chameleon-like change was in contrast to the steady role played by the man who was hearing his case. Governor Roosevelt, who knows better than anyone else the enormity of his political stake in the Walker case inquiry, went at the task confronting him with a calm and steady hand. He leaned over backward in his patent desire to be fair, yet seemed to know when to stiffen to keep the inquiry from getting unbalanced.

The hearing will be concluded this week, in all probability. It now appears, however, that the governor's decision may be held up indefinitely by legal devices. This should be avoided at any cost. Governor Roosevelt is the chief Democratic figure in a national political campaign. It would be unfair to him and unfair to those who are interested in him, whether as friends or opponents, to keep him under the cloud of so important a political decision.

Squelched

The trouble with revolutions is that they either are or aren't successful. They never turn out so-so.

This may be a week in which no revolution will occur. So far as American knew, none was supposed to occur last week, but Spanish royalists staged a surprise party for their republican friends.

It wasn't successful, despite at least an average amount of spilled blood. Somehow or other it failed to pick up the momentum that any uprising must gain almost instantly in order to overcome the entrenched party in control of the government.

When it was all over, Jos San Jurjo, erstwhile leader of the dissatisfied minority, had nothing to offer but the adequate explanation, "Everybody abandoned me." There is nothing more to be said. Still, it is not becoming in him or any other revolutionist to forget that there are many ways of doing the same thing.

Adolf Hitler was squelched once, too. His first revolution didn't amount to anything at all, but its failure served to make him more ambitious than ever. No one will deny that he has been doing a good piece of work—a real revolution achieved with oratory instead of bullets.

The abortive attempt at overthrow which excited Spain last week is an indication to the outside world that the royalists are far from willing to take a place on the shelf peacefully. Whether or not the Bourbon symbols of monarchy are active or possive in the situation is left to conjecture. Alfonse, adhering to good form, insists that he knew nothing of the attempt to bring back the family. A potential king, for all his blue blood, is not much different from a "people's choice" politician. His best game is a waiting game. If his can get the people to make the advances he improves his tactical position. Significantly, the deposed but hopeful monarchy of Spain has issued no orders to royalists to give up the cause. While there is a chance, they will be waiting.

Easy Chair Spectators

The Olympic games of today are reminders of many things, from champions of previous years to the lore of the Greeks and from there on back again. Each revival of the event opens a storehouse of memory and speculation to delight the world.

This year's games are reminder, also, that the world is becoming a more interesting, if not always a better, place to live. Consider the breadth over which detailed descriptions and photographs of the Olympic games were spread this year, almost as rapidly as the events were run off.

The workman on his 6 o'clock street car read in his morning paper everything that had happened the previous day. The office worker was kept informed throughout the day concerning the achievements of his favorites. Moving pictures of important events were shown on the screen. Newspaper and magazine pictures brought athletes closer by far to the easy chair spectators a thousand miles from Los Angeles than the eye of stadium spectators could bring performers a thousand feet away.

There was not an instant during the course of the games that this process of spreading enjoyment of the Olympic games was not continuing—in the United States, in England, Canada, France, Japan, Australia, Finland, Sweden—in every nation with contestants in the game, and that almost includes every nation with newspapers and moving pictures. It was one of the biggest stories of the year—a story that ran continuously for two weeks with no cessation of suspense.

Most remarkable of all, it was a cheerful story—a constantly expanding record of physical accomplishment creditable to mankind. Warned to expect many threats to kindly international feeling, Americans, particularly, were pleased with the absence of poor sportsmanship. As national hosts they felt a collective responsibility for the success of the event this year. Now that it has come to a successful conclusion they are frankly happy that the United States has given the next host to Olympic athletes such a high mark at which to aim.

Highlights of Ohio History

ONLY THE NAME REMAINS.

By J. H. Galbraith.

Only the name Utopia, attached to a Clermont county hamlet, is left to indicate that there once existed several organizations of a society based upon communism.

In 1844, such a group was formed in Clermont county and bought three tracts of land in Franklin township, but the movement blew up when members became dissatisfied with their own condition.

This group was known as the fourtierites and a spiritualistic colony bought some of the Franklin township land. It also fell into trouble and its end was hastened when a great flood swept away the main building with a loss of 17 lives.

Then Uptopia was founded.

Some from the disbanded fourtierites and some from the spiritualistic banded together to establish Utopia. For a few years, the members were happy. But dissatisfaction came and many of the more vigorous members withdrew and eventually the rest, with the action of the trustees of Utopia, discarded the communistic features of the hamlet and it became just like the other little towns of that vicinity.

New York Day By Day

By O. O. McINTYRE.

NEW YORK, Aug. 16—This is not a pretty pastel of the literary work but it comes from an earnest, distinguished man of letters. As such, it should be of special interest to ambitious writers, so many of them write about their hopes and fears. Here it is:

"I do not believe there are in the world today more than 200 men and women making enormous money, writing. When I say enormous money, I am thinking of something around $150,000 a year. This is not so big in big professions—law, banking, medicine and even among movie stars.

"I know perhaps a thousand famous writers, poets and artists who, when not in galling poverty, are in shabby-genteel, just-getting-along niches of life. Most of them have aching worries regarding the future and a dependent old age. Take yourself as a fairly conspicuous example.

"You are a protagonist of the modern whirl. I do not know your income, although I suspect it is rather large. Yet if, as in the old days before the syndication, you were paid by a single newspaper, the returns would be comparatively insignificant. Not more than $5,000 a year at top-most.

Well, illiterate gag men, brewing sewage combustion from the gutters, make thrice that working for a single firm in Hollywood. Richard Harding Davis, who with Irwin Cobb and Frank Ward O'Malley, was one of the three best reporters, left about $3,000. In any other calling he would have amassed $500,000.

"But for sales and resales of movie rights after death there would be no estate. Our benign government does not encourage the writer, whose professional life is ten years. It taxes him, and unjustly, more than big business which, incidentally, put America in the frightful dilema she is in today.

"Such a gloriously magnificent writer as Don Marquis has been lured—and who can blame him?—from literature by fancy salaries of the movies. One of his talented and devoted admirers once wrote: "O rare Don Marquis! Devout and ribald sipirt, he has also known the Tavern of Despair, whose fireside bench is well polished by many old customers." Don, in Hollywood, found making a living a minor technique. His 'tavern of despair' today is a Spanish castle with flaming awnings and a patio. To literature's eternal loss!

"Poe, penniless, has many replicas. You know them as well as I. Indeed, you were dining with three the last time we met. Talented fellows of infinite genius and writing charm, hacking at penny-liners and ticking off sonnets to assuage hunger. Even a monger of scandal makes ten times what the average forthright novelist does, who gives purity to his far worthier literary ideals.

"I am not embittered. You, I think, know that, I have educated my children in the best colleges and launched them successful in life. I have a good home and live well. I am known as a writer, but most of my income has come from sidelines. Save for my multiple outside activities, I could not have made more than $5,000 a year. Thus have I gone adventuring with many cargoes, and I have worked from 12 to 14 hours a day for 25 years.

"There is no money writing books, and how many playwrights wind up in the opulence of the banker, some of whom are proving crooks. One of the most famous playwrights is supported by old friends. You can see many of them who authored successes of other years, around the Players and the Lambs, showing seedy through the tatters of time.

"I saw all this years ago, and decided to scatter my fire. I have written books, plays and even newspaper columns, and I never wrote a line of which I was ashamed. Yet my biggest income has come through writing advertisement booklets, brochures for varied commercial activities, but they took much out of me. I could have written far better books without such millstones around my neck.

"Finally, let no one envy the so-called famous novelist or playwright. I have passed three along the street within the past six months. They were riding the big breaker in their day, yet it would be a strain for most people to recall them today. Europe remembers its writers by public squares and pensions and streets named for them. In America we pay this deference to the Jimmy Walkers."

How To Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND.

HEART disease continues to be one of the leading causes of disability in middle age. Many cases of heart disease could have been prevented if proper precautions had been taken. Too often the sufferer goes to a physician too late, when little help can be given.

The heart pumps blood through the body. By this action the blood, rich in oxygen from the lungs and nutritive elements from the food, is distributed to the organs and tissues of the body. This means that the heart has to do a great deal of work.

The heart is made up of many muscles and if these are weakened, either as a result of infection or disease, their efficiency is decreased and less work should be demanded of the heart.

It is here that a great mistake is made. Few realize that the heart, like any other muscle in the body, requires rest when fatigued. If the heart muscles is allowed to rest and is given proper care, it becomes refreshed and strengthened, able to resume the normal demands made upon it.

Excessive calls for work must never be placed upon a damaged and diseased heart. Severe and exerting labor must be avoided. Enough hours of sleep and sufficient rest are imperative. It is often advisable to take on regular hours in bed for the needed heart rest.

Violent exercise is a common cause of heart disease. It is dangerous even for a normal heart, and suicidal for one who has a damaged heart.

Overweight is another common and neglected cause for heart disease. Carelessness in eating, especially overating, leads to heart trouble. Chronic indigestion, constipation, infected teeth, tonsils, sinuses, gallbladder and other diseased organs are contributary factors in producing heart disease.

I cannot overemphasize the importance of rest. In advanced cases of heart disease it may be necessary to have periods of complete rest for days, or even weeks. This is the only way to permit the heart to recuperate.

I know many persons who take one or two hours of rest in the middle of the day. They are sensible. They realize their weakness and know that rest is the only way to prevent heart failure. It is only a foolish man who whips his tired horse homeward bound.

Sufferers from heart disease should report to their physician at regular intervals. Examination of heart, lungs, and blood pressure at stated times is a wise precaution. An examination of the urine should be made at each visit.

Please bear in mind that heart disease does not mean shortened life; but it does not mean that your expectation of life is determined by the care and respect you give your heart.

ONCE OVER

By J. J. Mundy.

At Home.

You raise much objection to certain noises in your home and state vigorously that they unnerve you.

The children's mechanical toys drive you to madness.

You think they should be operated only in your absence.

It requires very little to irritate you in your home.

Isn't it because you make no effort to control yourself?

Where you are employed annoying things occur but you go ahead with your work just the same because you must, or lose your job.

If you used only a small part of the effort you exert at control during business hours, when you reach home, you would not be heard grumbling at home.

You are right in asking for quiet in your home when you want to rest, but if you think that the family should tiptoe around and be noiseless in every thing they do while you are at home you are demanding too much.

If you want to be welcome in your own home, don't ask the family to make too many changes in their regular routine.

To have to be on guard all the time is as irksome to your wife and children as it would be to you if it were required of you.

You don't want them to prefer your absence, do you?

Rewards

BY ALINE MICHAELIS.

Of all rewards beneath the sun
The best is this: to hear within,
Above the world's loud strife and din,
A quiet voice that says: "Well done!"

Some labor long for worldly fame,
And count it as life's highest prize;
Star-bright, sun-bright in their rapt eyes
Shines this fair gift of man's acclaim.

And others hold the praise of friends
A thing more dear, of greater worth;
Love's voice alone they ask of Earth,
For every lack it makes amends.

But best of all the guerdons won
In Earth's applause, or friendly hearts;
The voice which greatest bliss imparts,
Is one within that says "Well done!"

The Reviewing Stand

By TOM T. JONES.

EAST Liverpool folk were interested in the summer of 1903 by the organization of a new cornet band in Sebring where many former residents of this locality had gone to assist in the manning of the pottery plants which then were being operated there. Others were intrigued by the fact that the famous Carrie Nation had been procured for an address at Idora park in Youngstown.

Among the farmers of Columbiana county in this same interim there was decided interest in the showing of W. D. Miller, a resident near Scio, Harrison county, with sheep. That season he procured 200 pounds of wool from 78 yearlings an average of more than 11 pounds to each sheep.

It was in this year of 1903 that adherents and devotees of Bethany college hereabouts heard the pleasant information that the institution during the preceding year had for the first time in several years paid its running expenses from its revenues. There was optimism in the expectation of 300 students at the opening of the college that fall. Those then entering the school found that the old commencement hall had been remodeled into a boys' dormitory of 39 rooms. And this improvement had been added to by the erection of a new gymnasium.

On Sunday, June 22, 1903, Dr. David Jones, a former president of Adrian, Mich., college, was re-elected pastor of the First Methodist Protestant church in East Liverpool at a congregational meeting which followed the morning service of that day. At the same time Proctor Ankrim, one of the members of the church, was selected to represent the membership at the annual conference of the denomination which was to be held later in the year.

There was interest in sections of Columbiana county that year in the final sermon delivered by Rev. F. J. Cope at Elkton on Friday, June 26, that year. He was then also the pastor of the Friends' church in Salem. His farewell message was preliminary to his accepting a call to Columbus.

IN FORMER days Democrats throughout Ohio were frequently referred to as "The Unterrified" by their friends of the Republican opposition. It was declared by some of them that the "Unterrified" of 1903 assembled in the court house at Lisbon on Wednesday, June 24, 1903, to name a list of candidates for the fall election. This gathering of the party stood out at the time because it was the first similar assemblage of Democrats in 28 years which W. S. Potts, editor of the Lisbon Patriot, failed to attend.

East Liverpool and Wellsville citizens had the unusual pleasure on the evening of Friday, Nov. 14, 1879, of hearing a former vice president of the United States, the Honorable Schuyler Colfax, deliver an address upon "Abraham Lincoln" at the First Methodist church of the down-river city. His appearance was under the ausnices of the Cleveland & Pittsburgh Railway Reading Rooms association. In order that those of the Pottery City might be returned to their homes at the conclusion of the lecture a special train was arranged for their transportation.

On Jan. 24, 1903 Mr. and Mrs. Mark Brownlow and Mr. and Mrs. William Beardmore of this city sailed from New York City for England. There they spent several months in visiting the pottery section of the country. They returned to their home here in October of that year.

There were in former days many in East Liverpool who had at some time or other seen Joseph Jefferson, the famed actor, playing the role of "Rip Van Winkle." In 1903 many of these were impressed by the fact that this veteran actor was then concluding his 61st year upon the stage. At the time he also had played "Rip Van Winkle" for 39 consecutive years.

They were then interested in knowing that he essayed this role in which he became such a success by reason of his having read favorable comment of his own acting of Goldfish in "The Road to Ruin," which had been made by Washington Irving in his "Life and Letters." It was then given out that Joseph Jefferson, though appearing in infant roles at the age of three, really began his stage work at 10 when he imitated T. D. Rice, a commedian deliniating Negro character. Dressed as a replica of himself he was nightly released from a bag by Mr. Rice.

THE largest open-air gathering which up to that time was said to have been assembled in East Liverpool was that held on Brunt's Hill just off Calcutta Road and the later St. Clair avenue on Tuesday evening, June 23, 1903. The attraction upon that summer night was the then celebrated and widely known Colonel Cooper, a purveyor of medicine which he maintained had powerful curative properties.

Colonel Cooper was the man who wore a broadcloth suit which had buttons upon it that consisted of ten and twenty dollar gold pieces. Upon that evening he inaugurated a stay of one month in East Liverpool. He arrived in the city earlier in the day and was met by his own band of 20 pieces. He was accompanied by his wife and child. He came from Dayton where he attended a meeting of the directors of his company.

He was escorted to the grounds where his company of vaudeville artists had preceded him. At noon that day he paraded the streets of the city. Perhaps there never was such a parade in the entire annals of the community. He negotiated the several streets of the then town in a landeau that was drawn by two thoroughbred Kentucky horses.

But the singular feature of the departure was that as he proceeded he scattered money into the ranks of the witnessing populace. In the end he had a long procession following him. Some in this manner received unexpected finds of silver pieces.

Under the circumstances there was great interest in his first appearance on Brunt's hill. Hence the crowd that was attracted to the spot. Another feature of that opening night was a cake-eating contest which a young lad present won and received the sum of $5 for his gastronomical accomplishment.

Then he made a marked address describing the ills of mankind for which he recommended his medicine, a limited quantity of which he declared he had with him that evening. Over 200 hands went up when he asked the number interested. The supply was thus soon disposed of. On a subsequent night he had the sum of $1,000 upon a table beside him to give to dissatisfied customers. None demanded their money back. On the contrary there was an increased demand for the medicine.

ON another occasion there was a nail-driving contest during the preliminary session before the selling of this medicine upon Brunt's hill. This was won by one of the women present and she was given the sum of $5. Always there was a new attraction for the people which served to bring them upon the plot.

The address of Colonel Cooper was in itself an interesting departure. It dove-tailed nicely into the atmosphere which had been credited by the music given by his band and by the performances of his vaudeville artists. Finally he had a selling place near the entrance to the plot of ground which he occupied. There he frequently consulted those who came to see him. And there were many testimonials regarding the benefits that had been derived by those who had used his remedies.

The presence of Colonel Cooper in East Liverpool during those days more than a quarter of a century ago serves to direct attention to this method of selling remedies which formerly was a rather regular departure all over the country. It recalls the fact that some very capable musicians and entertainers were in this manner heard in the open by the public.

There were those who cured corns by the dropping of liquid upon the shoe leather just above where they exhibited themselves. There was the purveyor of snake oil who usually brought a number of ugly-looking rattlers with him and others of a less poisonous specie. These were on occasions laid upon the ground just between the people and the seller.

Many in East Liverpool will recall the perhaps last aggregation of medicine sellers to visit this city. At least this was perhaps the largest aggregation recently appearing here. It was in the summer of 1924 when a tent was erected near the California Hollow run just off West Ninth street. And they remained here for a considerable interval.

Crowds milled about the plot each evening to hear the very interesting and creditable program that was given preliminary to the selling of the various remedies offered the visitors to the grounds. And the sales were considerable. And some of the medicines then given the people were later sold in business houses here.

THE first flag to be floated over the Horace Mann school in the East End was unfurled on Friday, April 24, 1903. The school at the time was under the immediate supervision of Professor Miller. Superintendent R. E. Rayman and Professor Hugh F. Laughlin, in charge of music at the city schools, were in attendance at the event. The children then attending it paraded into the open and sang "The Star Spangled Banner," "America" and "Columbia the Gem of the Ocean" before the flag was flounted to the breeze. Many visitors were present and the occurrance had a stimulating effect upon the school life of the suburb and the city.

Under the auspices of the Ladies Auxiliary of the Y. M. C. A., and directed by Mrs. H. E. Monroe and Miss Lucy Skenninger there was depicted in the Sixth Street Opera house on Thursday night, April 23, 1903, a period of English history that was entitled "Oliver Cromwell."

There was a large number of young men and women in the cast of characters utilized. A chorus of 80 voices sang. D. M. McLane assumed the role of Oliver Cromwell while Dr. E. L. Trimmer appeared as Charles I. Mrs. W. R Dawson was Lady Cromwell and Sherman Herbert was John Hampden. The character of John Pym was assumed by Harry Wagner.

Mrs. Monroe was a scholar of note and a writer of ability. She had visited the depicted scenes in addition to having made a wide research in her stuy of the Cromwellian period. She gave an illuminating description of this part of English history while also showing views of the localities in which the events occurred.

The muscal program included a solo by Miss Alice Devon and the singing of a quartet in which she was also the soprano singer; Mrs H. M. Haines, contralto, Frederick Koch, tenor, and Charles Heath baritone. The chorus sang "Praise To God."

Mrs. J. C. Allison was the president of the auxiliary giving the performance at the time; Mrs. E. L. Trimmer the first and Mrs. W. W Hamilton the second vice president. The Faithful Cheat

BY RUBY M. AYRES

SYNOPSIS: When Mark Merriman sailed to the Congo, shortly after his secret marriage with Sondra Kent, Sondra thought she could not be happy, but now she realizes that she has learned to do without Mark. Her marriage was unpremeditated, for she had determined not to marry a poor man, and she begins to find that her hasty action does not bring her contentment. One factor in her dissatisfaction is the changed attitude of John Anderson, who she begins to believe must suspect something has happened. Anderson has advised Sondra and helped her financially, somewhat as a guardian, but underneath she has believed that he cared for her. He can not tell her about this, since he is married, living apart from his wife. He tells Sondra one evening that he is going abroad. She lives now with her married sister, Flora, who herself married for money.

Chapter 14.

NEWS OF JOHN.

SOMETIMES Sondra took out her wedding ring and looked at it, wondering if it really belonged to her—it seemed such an

"John gets in at six forty," Cass said.
"John!" Sondra said. She had turned slightly pale.

eternity since that hurried ceremony—that brief honeymoon.

Mark had written from the only port the ship had touched—a long passionate letter which she knew almost by heart, and yet there again she had the unreal feeling that it was merely something beautiful and quite apart from herself—this love of which he wrote so eloquently.

Of course if the door opened and he suddenly came in everything would be just as it was when they parted—she would recapture the old joy and happiness.

Sondra closed her eyes for a moment and tried to visualize his face, but somehow even that seemed to evade her.

She sighed and turned restlessly away.

Flora was out—when was she ever at home?—and for once in her life Sondra had an empty afternoon.

It was too wet to go out, and there was nowhere that she wanted to go.

John Anderson was still abroad; she had heard from him once or twice—from Paris, Vienna—Berlin—short, friendly letters which told her little or nothing, except that he was moving about and could give no fixed address except his bankers.

It was strange that she should miss him more than she missed Mark. It worried her, too, because it seemed all wrong that the man whom she loved and whose wife she was seemed to have faded into a far horizon, while the other, for whom she cared nothing, was always in her thoughts.

"It's because I'm so used to him," was the explanation she found. "There was always John to turn to—it's unkind of him to have stayed away so long."

She lit a cigaret and took up a rotogravure section, listlessly turning the pages.

The same old photographs of society people—opening bazaars, smiling into the camera with babies on their laps, dressed up in fancy costumes for charity performances, vying with each other for the most publicity.

Sondra yawned; if only something new and exciting would happen!

John at Biarritz! at this time of the year!

Sondra felt her face flushing. He had been in Vienna when he last wrote to her—and that was a week . . no, ten days ago.

And who was Nathalie Symons?

Sondra threw the paper aside.

Was this the reason why John was staying away for so long?

She sat for a long time, lost in thought, vague discomfort in her heart.

If only Mark had not gone away—if only she had been brave enough to face life with him.

When Mark came home. . . Sondra's mind seemed to stop short with a queer little pain. He had only been gone a month, and already she was half dreading the day when he would return, asking herself tortuous questions as to what they would do with life or what life would do with them when they were together again.

At the back of Sondra's mind was an ever growing doubt about her marriage, an ever growing consciousness that it would have been better to wait.

And yet she knew that given those last two days over again she would have used them in just the same way.

She got up restlessly once more and looked out of the window.

The rain was not so heavy, and there was a faint light everywhere, as if the sun was trying to break through.

A taxi sped up the street and came to a standstill at the door. Sondra watched without much interest. Presently a man got out—a man in a queer check suit with a flaming red tie—Stephen Cassidy.

She was conscious of great surprise; Cass did not like Flora, and neither did she like him, so it was very seldom he called, but now he spoke a word to the driver, evidently telling him to wait before he came on to the front door.

A moment later a maid was in the room.

"Will you see Mr. Cassidy, please, miss?"

"Ask him to come up." Sondra was glad of the diversion.

Cass came into the room wreathed in smiles, his hand outstretched.

He always brought a sense of breeziness with him, of good cheer and unquenchable optimism. Sondra realized again as he gave her hand a bear's grip how tremendously she liked him.

"Thought we'd go along together," he said without preamble. "Know Mrs. Lomax is out, or I shouldn't have dared to call. Saw her on Fifth avenue half an hour ago. Oughtn't you to get your hat on?"

"I don't know what in the world you're talking about," Sondra said laughingly. "Wouldn't it be as well to explain?"

His face looked a blank for a moment, then he said:

"But you're coming, aren't you?"

She made a gesture of despair.

"Coming where? I'm not a thought-reader."

Cass explained at last.

"To the pier, of course. The boat's in at six-forty. John will be on it."

There was a profound silence.

"John!" Sondra said; she had lost color a little.

"Are you sure," she asked, with an effort.

Lost 20 Lbs. of Fat In Just 4 Weeks

Mrs. Mae West of St. Louis, Mo., writes: "I'm only 28 years old and weighed 170 lbs. until taking one box of your Kruschen Salts just 4 weeks ago. I now weigh 150 lbs. I also have more energy and furthermore I've never had a hungry moment."

Fat folks should take one half teaspoonful of Kruschen Salts in a glass of hot water in the morning before breakfast—it's the SAFE, harmless way to reduce as tens of thousands of men and women know.

For your health's sake ask for and get Kruschen at any drug store—the cost for a bottle that lasts 4 weeks is but a trifle and if after the first bottle you are not joyfully satisfied with results—money back.

COLUMBIA

"The Dark Horse," in which Warren William, Bettie Davis and Guy Kibbee are featured, starts a two-day run today at the New Columbia theater.

"The Dark Horse," adopted by two former political correspondents from a story by an anonymous author, said to be a prominent political figure, concerns the difficulties encountered when a political party cannot reach an agreement on its candidate for governor and compromises on a "dark horse," who turns out to be difficult to handle because of a tendency to do the wrong thing at the right moment—for the opposing party. Warren William is called in to manage the candidate's campaign and steer him in the proper channels. The situation is productive of a brand of comedy rare on stage and screen.

CONDITION OF CROPS IN OHIO ENCOURAGING

U. S. Survey Shows Improvement During July.

By The Associated Press.

COLUMBUS, O., Aug. 16—Ohio crops were in better condition on August 1, than they were on the same date in July, the U. S. department of agriculture said in its monthly report made public today.

Corn showed a marked improvemet during the first half of July but made slow progress in the latter half of the month because of insufficient moisture. The August 1 condition was 81 per cent, one point above the average. The forecast is for a yield of 134,520,000 bushels.

Winter wheat turned out better than was expected in the northern part of the state, but was below expectations in the southern half. The yield per acre was placed at 20.5 bushels, which is nine bushels below the record yield of last year. Total production was estimated at 31,939,000 bushels compared with 50,534,000 last year.

Oats Crop Poor

A very poor crop of oats was harvested in southern Ohio. This was due to the early drouth which caused weedy fields and short straw. Many fields could not be cut with a binder. The condition of oats was 60 per cent with an estimated yield of 42,675,000 bushels.

Barley was reported as very poor with an estimated condition of 59 per cent. The crop yield was placed at 767,000 bushels. The buck wheat acreage this year was reduced to 22,000 acres with an estimated yield of 363,000 bushels.

The tame hay crop was nearly one fourth samller than in 1931 and the present estimate is for 2,429,000 tons as compared with 3,196,000 tons last year.

Potatoes Lack Rainfall.

Due to lack of rain fall, potatoes showed only slight improvement over July 1. The August 1 condition of 74 per cent indicates a yield of 87 bushels to the acre or 10,440,000 bushels.

The condition of apples indicated a yield of only slightly over one-third of the crop of 1931. The indicated crop is only 5,202,000 bushels compared with 14,600,000 last year. Considerable damage by scab codling moths and worms is reported. Pears were 49 per cent of normal on August 1, with an indicated yield of 348,000 bushels.

Peach Crop Below Normal.

The peach crop was estimated at 35 per cent of normal with an indicated production of 836,000 bushels compared with 2,220,000 bushels last year.

Grapes promise a larger crop than last year with production estimated at 33,014 tons.

Lack of rain during July caused a six per cent drop in the condition of Burley tobacco. The August 1 forecast of the Burley yield was 12,240,000 pounds.

ENTRIES POUR IN FOR NIGHT TOURNAMENT

Thursday Midnight Deadline

Softball Event Starts At Patterson Field On Monday.

WITH Thursday midnight as the deadline, entries are beginnig to pour in for the second annual Tri-state softball championship tournament to be held next week under the lights of Patterson field. The Tri-State Junior Atheletic association, sponsors of the affair, have practically completed plans for the event and work will be started soon to get the gridiron at Patterson field in good shape for softball.

Not only the teams themselves, but district softball fans are growing enthused over the prospect of watching the section's outstanding aggregations battle for the coveted championship at night. The East Liverpool tournament is the first event of its kind to be held at night in the state, although a number of clubs tried out the nocturnal sport last year with fine success.

Prospects that teams would be entered from Steubenville, Salem, East Palestine and Lisbon, in addition to all Pottery district clubs grew brighter today with inquiries being made. Entry blanks can be secured by writing H. J. Gallimore or at Dick Brian's store in East Fifth street. The entry fee is $5, each team being allowed to enter 14 players and a manager, the pilot being permitted to take part if he so desires.

Quite a large number of East Liverpool independent clubs have signified their intentions of entering, while the East End, Sunday School, Wellsville News, Panhandle and Midland leagues are also expected to be represented by the best the circuits have to offer.

Carnahan Drugs, leaders in the East End circuit, and Penn Avenue the classy pace-setters in the Church loop, are both expected to enter the battle. If they do enter, and happen to meet, a record-breaking crowd is certain to witness the struggle between the city's two outstanding ball clubs.

Many of the local clubs are strengthening for the tournament by adding pitchers from out-of-town. Riverview Greenhouse, occupying second place in the East end league, informed the tournament sponsors that they would have a classy battery on hand for the frays, and expect to make a good showing.

Columbus Association Team on Way to New Attendance Record

More Than 200,000 Fans Have Watched Fast-stepping Red Birds in Battle for Lead; Parmalee Subdues Milwaukee, 2-1.

By WILLIAM WEEKES,
Associated Press Sports Writer.

CHICAGO, Aug. 16—Even if the Columbus Red Birds don't win the American Association title—and there is little or no betting that they won't—they appear to be a cinch to set a new attendance record for the league.

Rules of the association prohibit giving out attendance figures, but with crowds or from 5,000 to 20,000 and covering most of the figures in between, the Cardinal farm organization today was around the 200,000 mark, and well on its way to surpassing Milwaukee's unofficial record of more than 250,000 for one season.

Dodgers Wallop Pirates

Carey's Charges Win First of Crucial Series, 11-6.

By HERBERT W. BARKER,
Associated Press Sports Writer.

First blood in the crucial series between the Brooklyn Dodgers and Pittsburgh Pirates rests with the Dodgers and second place in the National league, only a dream a few weeks ago, was only half a game away from Max Carey's charges today.

The Dodgers piled up nine runs in the first inning of their battle with the Corsairs yesterday and then coasted in to an 11-6 victory, their 20th in 25 games. Not only are the Pirates now only a half-step ahead but the league-leading Chicago Cubs are only a game and a half distant.

Heinie Meine was on the firing line for the Corsairs when the game opened, but he stayed around only long enough to get one man out.

The Brooklyn-Pittsburgh fray was the only game played in the major leagues, all other clubs having an off-day.

Heimie's Cigars and Tice Grocers put on one of the wildest games seen this year in the East End league when they clashed Monday at Upper Columbian park. The Cigarmen won, 5-4, in 10 innings, but they had to do some fancy rallying to turn the trick. It was Heimie's fifth win in six starts over the Ticemen and practically eliminated the losers from the race.

Heimie's gave Dick Wise a 2-0 lead in the first inning and it looked pretty good until Tice's put on a rally in the first of the ninth that gave them three runs and a 4-3 advantage. However in the last of the frame, Bloor doubled, went to third on a passed ball and scored on another.

Banks and Wildblood collaborated to win in the 10th, the former scoring when Jimmy beat out an infield hit with two out. Reese, Wildblood and Gregory got two blows apiece to lead the hitters.

Riverview Greenhouse scored all their runs in the first of the ninth inning to defeat Benedums, 5-3, and take over possession of second place. Tracey Hancock's triple with the bases full, followed by Roberts' home run did the work. Benedums had previously tallied three runs, although being held to a trio of hits by Damon Smith. Roberts, with three blows, and Mountford and Hancock with two were the hitters.

Tommy Wolfe hurled three-hit ball as Green Grocers blanked Beers-Hanks Motors, 3-0. The victory enabled Greens to remain tied with Heimie's for fourth place. Greens tallied all their runs in the second frame. Mackall got three hits. Summaries:

GARLAND FAVORS JAPAN IN 1940

By The Associated Press.

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 16—William May Garland, president of the Los Angeles organizing committee which staged the international games finished, wants to see the olympic torch carried to Tokyo in 1940.

One of America's three members of the international olympic committee, Garland said he would help Japan get the twelfth olympiad.

"It will be a long distance for some of the ations to travel," Garland pointed out, "just as Los Angeles was a long journey for many parts of the world, but I believe the Japanese can, and if given the opportunity, will stage one of the most successful olympiads in history."

Scientists have discovered that there exists a relation between the size and quality of grapes, and the number of leaves on the vine.

SALES TAX TO GET NEW START

Proposal Is Being Warmed up for Another Swing Through Legislative Mill.

By The Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 16—The sales tax, cause of many a bitter congressional debate, right now is being warmed up for another start through the legislative mill.

Of course, before congress meets the fire may go out, but there still are members who think a general sales tax of, say 1¾ per cent, should be substituted for the many special excise levies now in the law.

Senator Smoot, chairman of his branch's finance committee, predicts that the December session will see a new study of the tax situation. In the house, where all tax legislation must originate, Democrats already have a special committee surveying the problem.

Mrs. McCormick's Illness Reconciles Estranged Kin

* * * * * *

To a degree unprecedented, perhaps, in recent years, the spotlight of human interest levelled its focus during the last few days on past and previous quarrels within a family. Lying on her bed in a Chicago hotel, suffering from an illness which physicians only hours before had diagnosed as probably fatal, Mrs. Edith Rockefeller McCormick, daughter of John D. Rockefeller, received with evident pleasure the news that her children, from all of whom she had been estranged for long periods of time, were hastening to her bedside.

Mrs. McCormick had for many years been considered the richest woman in the world. On the death of the late Mrs. Potter Palmer, she had become Chicago's social leader. She engaged in the real estate business on a gigantic scale. Her assets, estimated in the scores of millions, became "frozen" a few weeks before her critical illness began. Her brother, John D. Rockefeller Jr., stepped into the breach and provided his sister with a cash allowance of $1,000 a day. Nevertheless she closed her stone mansion and moved to a hotel to save expenses. Then came her illness and the healing of the family breaches.

Her former husband, Harold Fowler McCormick, from whom she was divorced in 1921, started for her bedside from the west coast. Her daughter Mathilde, who incurred maternal displeasure of an unrelenting kind in 1923 by her marriage to Max Oser, Swiss riding master, started for her mother's sick room from Cherbourg, France. Mrs. McCormick's son, Herald Fowler McCormick Jr., who was the recipient of cool maternal disapproval when he married Fifi Stillman, mother of his college chum and divorced wife of the New York banker, sent word that he would be at the bedside soon. Daughter Muriel, who failed to please her mother when she married Major Elisha Dyer Hubbard of Connecticut last year, journeyed to Chicago and found maternal forgiveness.

Before her illness set in, Mrs. McCormick had planned to go east to visit her father, the 93-year-old oil king, from whom she had been estranged for many years.

BAKER NOT TO GREET NOMINEE

Clevelander Unable to Go to Democratic Meet.

By The Associated Press.

COLUMBUS, O., Aug. 16.—Newton D. Baker, former secretary of war, has decided he will be unable to be here Saturday when Governor Franklin D. Roosevelt of New York opens his presidential campaign at the Democratic state platform convention.

In a letter to Chairman Henry G. Brunner of the state executive committee Baker explained that he probably would be on vacation and that he already has "made plans involving my family of such character that it is too late to change them."

Himself mentioned for the nomination won by Roosevelt at the Chicago convention, Baker said his "winter's work is still hanging on, and all the vacation I can get this summer is likely to be in the ten days following today.

"I am especially sorry not to be present at the state convention in view of the fact that Governor Roosevelt is to be there. And I would naturally be happy if I could join the Democrats of the state in welcoming him to Ohio."

Baker's presence at the state convention would have placed all of Ohio's "big four" Democratic chieftains on the platform with Roosevelt, U. S. Senator Robert J. Buckley will be the keynoter, while former Governor James M. Cox will introduce the nominee. Governor George White will welcome him on behalf of the state.

MIDLAND WILL RUSH BOATS

Barge Company to Start Steamer Soon.

The bottom plates for the first two steel towboats for the Inland Waterways corporation, Federal Barge line, will be laid at the Midland shipyards of the Midland Barge company within the next 30 days, it was announced today. The boats will be known as the Tom Sawyer and Huck Finn.

The steamer J. D. Ayres passed here early today with a large tow of manufactured steel products, enroute from Pittsburgh to Memphis and intermediate ports. The Ohio river remained stationary here today, with stages of 15.7 feet in the upper pool and 12 feet in the lower pool at lock No. 8.

Traffic was light on the river Monday, the following boats being locked through at No. 8:

The Duquesne, Pittsburgh to Mingo, with four barges of coal and two barges of flue dust, and back with six empty barges; the Plymouth, Point Pleasant to Pittsburgh, with two empty barges and one barge of fuel; the Liberty, Charleston to Pittsburgh, with 125 tons of merchandise and eight passengers, and the Winifred, Pittsburgh to New Cumberland, with one barge each of sand and gravel, and back without a tow.

SON IS BORN TO LINDBERGHS

Baby Arrives at Morrow Home in Englewood.

made the Lindbergh home their headquarters.

Assuaged Grief in Activity.

Colonel Lindbergh, from the moment on that blustery March night when he first discovered his first son was missing, has sought assuagement of his grief in constant activity of one sort or another.

Up to the time the baby's body was found he was always in the van of searchers, himself directing various phases of the hunt for the kidnapers and attempting negotiations with them through the agency, among others, of Dr. John F. Condon, aged Bronx educator, and John Hughes Curtis, Norfolk, Va., boat builder.

Through Dr. Condon, who had negotiated for the return of the baby through newspaper advertisements signed "Jafsie," he paid a futile $50,000 ransom which Dr. Condon passed over a cemetery hedge in the Bronx.

Colonel Witness at Trial.

After the baby's body was found, at which time Col. Lindbergh was on a boat following a clue given him by Curtis, the Norfolk shipbuilder was arrested and charged with obstructing justice.

At a trial at which Col. Lindbergh was one of the principal witnesses, Curtis was convicted. He was sentenced to serve one year in prison and pay a fine of $1,000 and is now at liberty under bail pending appeal.

During all the frenzied months of search for the missing baby and attempts to capture the kidnap-murderers after it was found that the baby was dead, preparations went steadily forward for the arrival of the second child, who was born today.

While the Lindberghs remained at Hopewell, during the long search for their first son, Mrs. Linbergh made weekly visits to the Morrow home here for consultation with physicians. Since the Curtis trial she has remained in her mother's home under constant medical supervision.

Aunts, Uncle Abroad.

Mrs. Lindbergh was attended while awaiting birth of her second child, by Dr. Edward Hawkes, the specialist who attended her at the birth of her first child. Dr. Hawkes was in frequent consultation of the case also with Dr. Edward H. Dennen and three other specialists.

After the Curtis trial Col. Lindbergh sought to occupy his mind by turning once more to business affairs and has spent much time daily at his own office in lower Broadway and in the offices of Pan-American airways in the Grand Central district, an international air line company of which he is technical director. Only yesterday he made a short test flight at Newark airport of a new type of plane.

Although Mrs. Morrow returned from abroad recently to be here at the time of the birth of her grandchild, the new baby's two aunts and an uncle, Elizabeth, Constance and Dwight Morrow, were still abroad.

Lindy Turns to Science

When the first Lindbergh baby was kidnaped, Mrs. Lindbergh's first thought was for its health. The baby had been suffering from a cold and only for that reason had the Lindberghs stayed over the week-end and been in Hopewell on the night the kidnapers came.

In the hope of safeguarding the child's health, Mrs. Lindbergh broadcast a detailed description of the baby's diet and begged the kidnapers to continue this diet pending their return of the child to its parents.

Besides his work for aviation, Col. Lindbergh has also more recently turned to scientific investigation and has been a frequent worker in the laboratories of the Rockefeller institute. He has published one article on the results of his search and is known to have been continuing his work, although little hs been made known of its nature.

Morrow Home Guarded

When the Lindberghs first built their home at Hopewell in the isolated Sourland hills region, it was generally supposed they would have their estate guarded against any possible interlopers. Col. Lindbergh, however, wished to be on completely neighborly terms with the nearby farmers and tradespeople and for this reason had no guards in his employ.

There was much speculation today as to what means he would take to guard against kidnaping of the new baby. No immediate steps in this direction would be necessary, however, as the Morrow home has always been fully guarded since the first Lindbergh baby was born there.

The baby lost through kidnapers was a chubby boy with blue eyes, fair complexion, golden curly hair. He resembled the famous aviator closely. The end of his life came when he was just beginning to toddle.

Flew into Fame in 1927.

Colonel Lindbergh flew into fame in 1927 when he piloted the "Spirit of St. Louis" across the Atlantic to Paris to win the $25,000 Ortig prize. Before that he had completed army flying instruction and been an air mail pilot flying between St. Louis and Chicago. He was the son of a Minnesota congressman. His mother lives in Detroit.

The Paris flight and subsequent trail-blazing in the air made of him an international hero.

His marriage to Ann Morrow helped to weld friendly relations between the United States and Mexico. The romance bloomed in Mexico City, where Mrs. Lindbergh's father, the late Senator Dwight W. Morrow, was the American ambassador. During the courtship—largely in the air—the couple lost a wheel from a plane on a takeoff and crashed on the landing. Lindbergh was slightly injured, his fiancee unhurt.

The wedding took place in Englewood in 1929.

Forty-seven convicts comprise the band which is led by a fellow prisoner. When the fire damaged two cell blocks, causing the heavy death toll, and the subsequent disorders, all privileges were revoked and the band taken from the air.

GIRLS FREED ON CHARGE OF SHOPLIFTING

Mother Admits Children Were Taught To Steal.

By International News Service.

COSCHOCTON, O. — Driven to stealing by the pinch of poverty, two little girls of Chili, village in the eastern part of Coshocton county, were permitted by Coshocton merchants to return to their farm home, with only the chastisement of Mayor Johnson Smith as their punishment.

Caught in the act of carrying off a number of articles from a local business place, Emma and Elizabeth, 15 and 11, respectively, told a pitiful story when haled into mayor's court for shoplifting.

Confessing they had carried off in a large cotton bag from several Coshocton stores articles valued at close to $25, the girls stated that they had been taught shoplifting and petty thievery by their mother.

The mother, Mrs. Lesta Powell, verified the girls' story in Mayor Smith's court. It has been a long time, Mrs. Powell said, since her husband has had work. The family has been barely existing. There were no funds for clothing, and the family subsisted on the most meager food. The mother and the daughters were sadly in need, and the daughters were taught to go into business places, slip articles into a large sack and pull the drawstring tight. It wasn't stealing; they needed it.

KIDNAPER TO BE TRANSFERRED

By The Associated Press.

COLUMBUS, O., Aug. 16.—J. B. Cox, convicted kidnaper of F. A. Hoiles, publisher of the Alliance Review, will be transferred to the Lima state hospital for criminal insane if recommendations of the state parole board are carried out.

In a report today, the board announced it had paroles for 24 inmates of the Ohio penitentiary out of 79 cases considered at its last meeting.

Fox is serving a seven to 30 years sentence for the kidnaping of Hoiles, whose life he threatened. Hoiles, according to prison records, paid $6,000 to Cox in exchange for which Cox left worthless stock in a bus line on Hoiles' desk. Cox was later arrested in Akron.

BOYS' BAND TO PROVIDE MUSIC AT STATE FAIR

300-piece Organization Formed by Manager Beer.

By The Associated Press.

COLUMBUS, O., Aug. 16—Guess what Charles M. Beer, Ohio state fair manager, would get if he took a complete symphonic band and multiplied it by four.

Give up? So did everybody else Beer asked today.

Well, he triumphed, he'd get—or at least he said he'd get—the 300-piece boys' band which will thrill the customers and make the horses prance at Ohio's greatest of all state fairs, here Aug. 29 to Sept. 3.

Imagine 16 flutes and piccolos; 8 eboes; 90 clarinets; 28 saxopones; 12 bassoons; 48 trumpets; 26 French horns; 12 baritones; 25 trombones; 22 basses and 12 percussion instruments—all in one band.

All Arrangements Made

It taxes Beers imagination, too, he said, but arrangements already have been made to bring the boys, recruited from all parts of the state, here for the fair.

The fair manager thinks you ought to be able to hear this band all the way from here to Gallipolis and back, but he isn't taking chances. To make sure, he's arranging broadcasts.

So, on three afternoons the week before the fair, the band's music will be broadcast over WAIU and other stations from the state capitol lawn.

Louis E. Pete will have five assistants in directing the band and Beer will help them enforce rigid discipline over the youthful musicians.

Housing Facilities Provided.

Everything has been arranged to make the visitors' stay a pleasant on. They'll live in floored tents and nurses and health department inspectors will help them keep their camp sanitary.

The tents will be enclosed by an 8-foot wire mesh fence and an officer will be on guard constantly at the main gate of the enclosure.

Special uniforms will be issued to the group and are to be cleaned twice in the week the bandsmen are here.
